“I AM AN AMERICAN”

I Am An American (1944) is documentary short by Crane Wilbur about Fyodor and Maria Kanowski, an Eastern Europe couple that immigrates from Polish-Ukraine to the United States. The film highlights the couple’s experience from New York to rural Ohio, and the husband’s military service in the Civil War. The film also shows a commemorative celebration of “I Am An American” Day, which was later renamed Citizenship Day by an act of Congress in 1952.

(film is approximately 15 minutes)

“LAST DAY OF FREEDOM”

Last Day of Freedom (2015) is an animated short documentary by Dee Hibbert-Jones and Nomi Talisman that explores access to mental health care and veterans’ care and the U.S. criminal justice system through the relationship of two brothers—Bill and Manny Babbitt.
