FEDLINK Staff Update - Two FEDLINK staffers are beginning retirement!

Blane K. Dessy, the director of National Enterprises in the National and International Outreach service unit at the Library of Congress and FEDLINK's acting executive director, announced his retirement earlier this summer and celebrated his last day of federal service on August 31. He came to the federal government after working as a State Librarian (Alabama), Deputy State Librarian (Ohio), library consultant (Oklahoma), and public library director (Pennsylvania). He was the first executive director of the National Library of Education and later served as the Director of Libraries at the United States Department of Justice. In addition to his work with FEDLINK, his management portfolio included the Federal Research Division (FRD), Business Enterprises, and the Publishing Office. Prior to this, he was Deputy Associate Librarian for Planning and Project Management in Library Services.

Jim Oliver, FEDLINK's vendor services coordinator, also retired on August 31. Jim's Library of Congress career at FEDLINK spanned over 27 years as the vendor services coordinator. Jim was a familiar face whenever FEDLINK exhibited at library and acquisition conferences. His work with the FEDLINK vendor community assured they had had access to the broad federal information community. Jim provided superior customer service!

Please join the FEDLINK staff in wishing Blane and Jim all the best in the next chapter of their lives.
