With a significant number of researchers working remotely, simplifying and expediting access to full text has never been more important. Whether researchers are searching sites like Google or using library resources, they expect to know what content is available to them, whatever the point of discovery, and to get to it in one-click.

Join Kendall Bartsch, Co-founder and CEO of the library technology company Third Iron, to learn how over 1,000 libraries around the world are using the innovative LibKey service to remove common obstacles to access, to better connect users with library resources, and to streamline library operations.

Online Demo Details

Join us to find out how Third Iron can help you simplify access to content, saving your researchers' valuable time, reducing library help desk requests, and minimizing the number of unnecessary interlibrary loan requests. A product overview and live demonstration will be provided.
